

Psychological Aspects of Telemedicine

Aleksandar KNEŽEVIĆ

Besides unquestionable advantages that telemedicine can offer to a contemporary human being, there are some special features of this procedure that can be applied for particular groups of patients such as:

- 1. Individuals characterized with introversion, anxiety and timidity, and*
- 2. Individuals characterized with hypersensitivity where personal contacts with a therapist may lead to mistreatment of personality mechanisms and evoke suspicion, misunderstanding, and conflict situation that sometimes result in discontinuation of necessary communication with a therapist.*
